BENSON J. SHERWOOD DEAD.

Passing Away of an Old and Well-Known Stage Carpenter.

Benson J. Sherwood, the stage car penter of the Madison Square Garden died yesterday of gastritis at his Sumser home, in Amityville, J. I.

The deceased was one of the most calling. He was born in New York in 1838. He began work as a stage hand in Laura Keene's theatre, the distinguished himself in building the stage for the first production of the 'Black Crook' at Niblo's, and developed a variety and ingenuity of fancy in constructing trick nechanism for the stage that gave him a reputation at once. During his forty sears of active work he was at the fifth Avenue Theatre, the Grand Operaliouse and the Madison Square Garden, and at these theatres did the stage building for some of the grantest actors, including Hooth and Barrett, and some of the most fameus preductions of the century in America.
